Togetherness

The merging of two rival schools could be a difficult task. When it was announced Briarwood and Headland were to be combined, the student bodies from both schools experienced mixed emotions about how things would go. After the school year began however, it was realized how smoothly the transition could take place. A new spirit of togetherness was formed uniting both Highlanders and Buccaneers into Warriors.

RAINFOREST

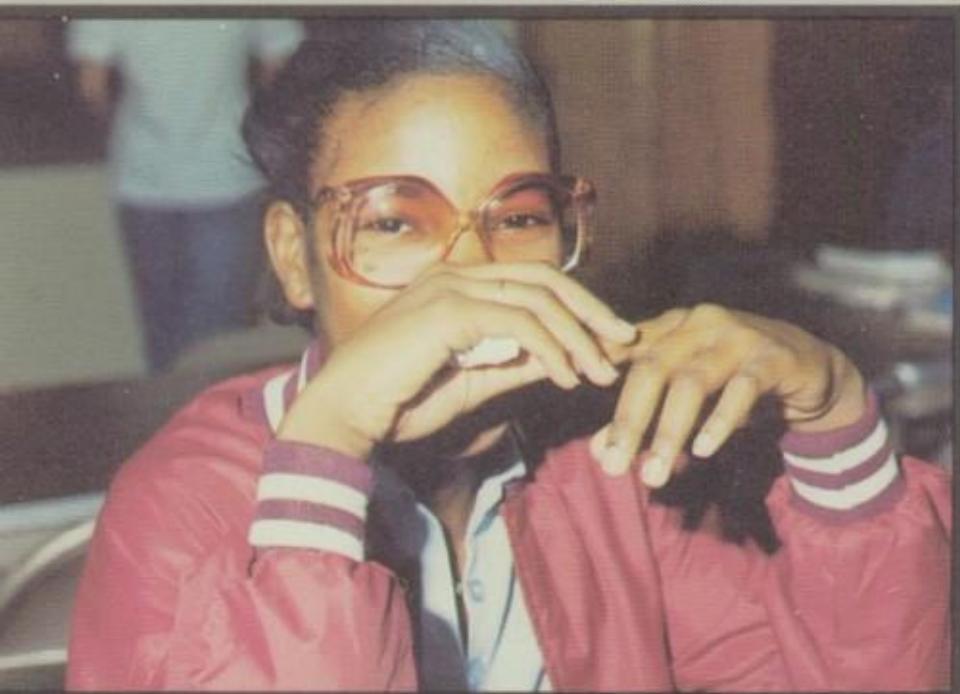

Along with the spirit of togetherness a feeling of happiness accompanied the Warrior. This feeling was expressed in many ways, from joking with friends to participating in class activities. School spirit was another display of happiness. Friends campaigning for student office, yelling at pep rallies, and supporting the football team, combined, helped to create an element of friendship. After all, happiness consists of having friends.

EXTRACURRICULARS

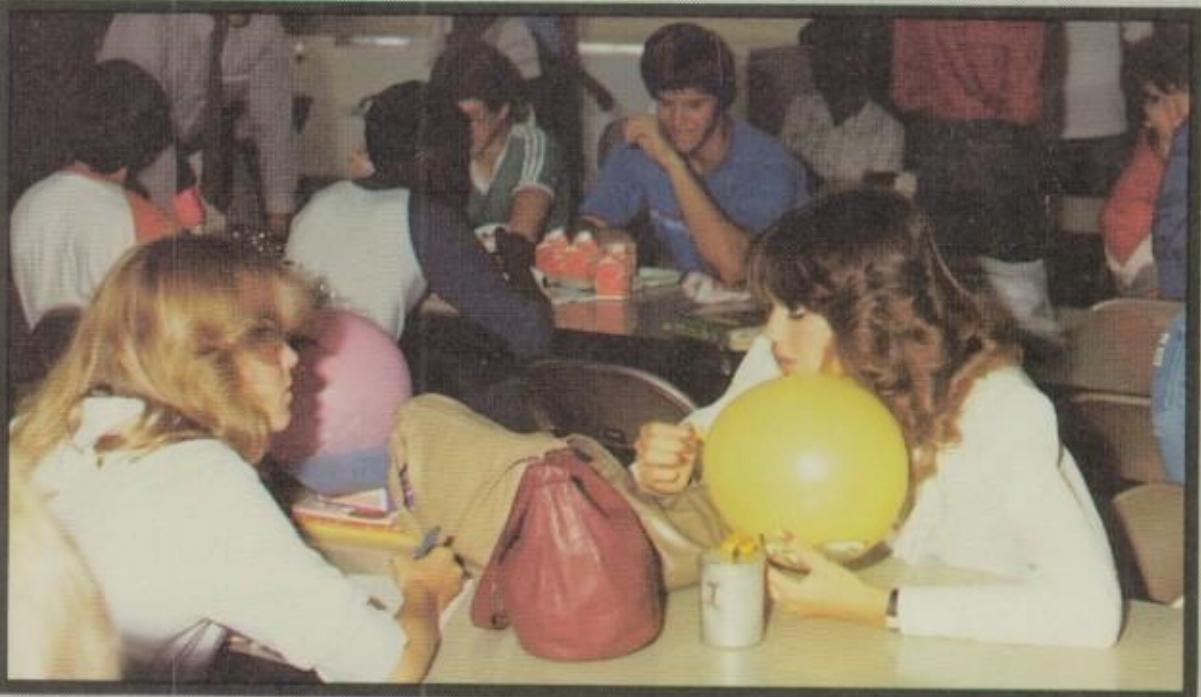

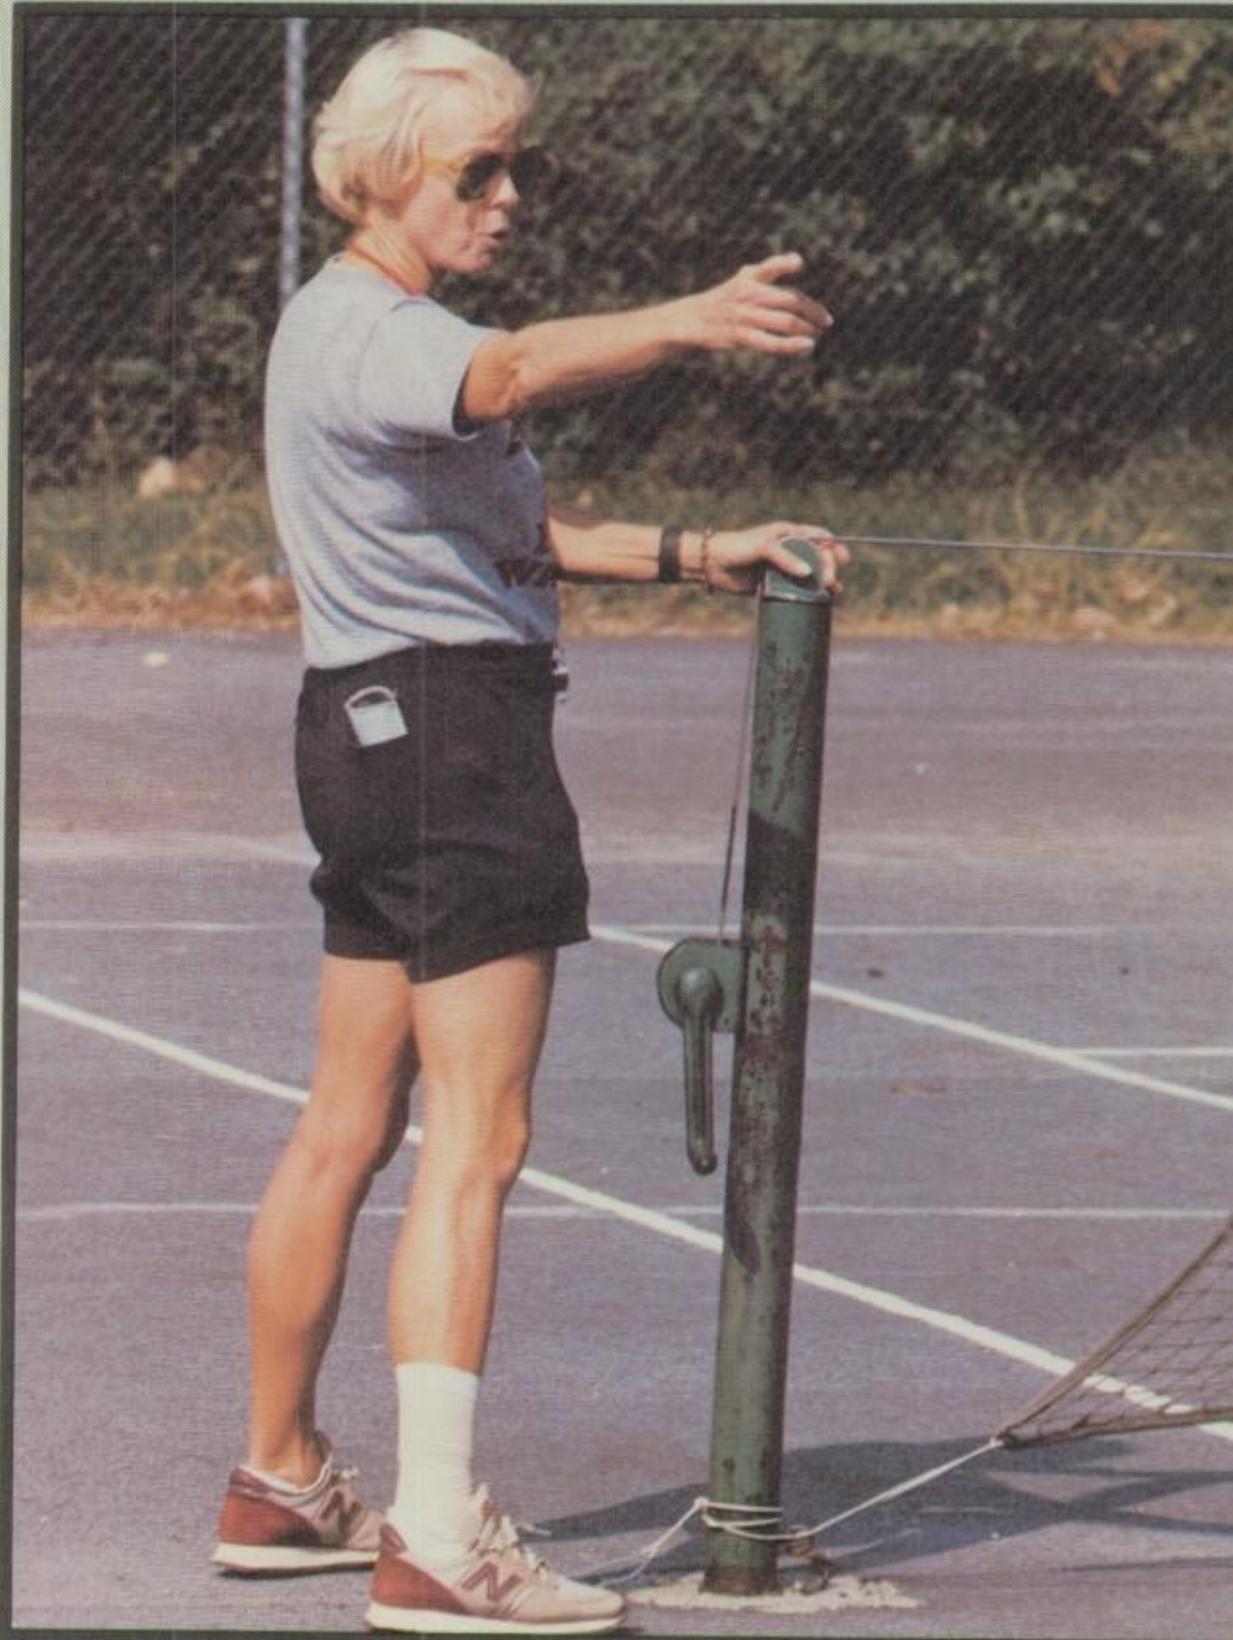

Acquiring knowledge was important to fully develop the Woodland Warrior. Not only was book knowledge achieved but the opportunity for a "hands on" experience was given in many courses offered. The course offerings had become greater in number with the combining of the two schools. This allowed for more learning experiences. Learning often required assistance which could be found in the library which was available for student use at all times. In a student's quest for knowledge, personal motivation along with helpful teachers provided the Warrior with the necessary equipment to carry on in the Woodland tradition.

The first year of Woodland High School challenged the Warriors to make a new start. In order for this to occur, old traditions had to be abolished and new ones established. A Warrior became known as a person who was willing to take on the responsibility to formulate a school that will surpass the quality of the two schools from which it was formed. We the students at Woodland have successfully completed the first trial one step at a time.

Dear Teacher,

Thank you for . . . building us toward our goals and aspirations. You prepared us (whether we know it or not) for what lies ahead. You helped us choose our careers, and by your example taught us how to be adults.

Thank you for . . . treating us as people, and helping us as individuals. You explained things to us, and understood us even when we might not understand ourselves.

Thank you for . . . working especially hard this year to make Woodland the high school that it is. You worked hard for unity among yourselves and us. You introduced yourselves to us with energy and excitement, and you made it easier for us to accept new academic standards.

Thank you for . . . reaching out and helping us get a good education. We didn't realize many times how important education was, but you based your lives on it. You helped us understand that an education didn't just come from books and lectures, but that it came too from the interaction of minds and hearts. You didn't just teach us how to read and write, and add, you taught us how to live.

Freshmen

The freshmen class of Woodland High School demonstrated their spirit by a variety of means. These include entering a float in the Homecoming Float Contest and participating in pep rallies. Unfortunately, this has been the freshmen's second consecutive year on "the bottom rung of the ladder" because of the formation of this new school.

Seniors

The senior class of '83 was the first graduating class of Woodland High. This group of outstanding individuals was faced with the task of providing an example for lower classes to follow.

Seniors supported Woodland by participating in homecoming festivities, showing spirit at pep rallies, and leading the student body through student government.

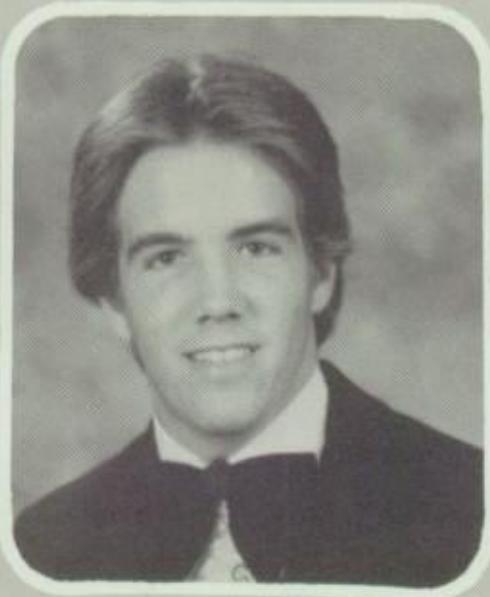

In any senior class, the attitudes of the students and their participation in activities is important. Woodland's first graduating class has shown a fine display of their unity and friendship.

This year the senior class officers were: Dexter Block — President, Keith Stell — Vice President, Carla Tare — Secretary, and Bobbi Cheeks — Treasurer.

Organization Editor — Kim Harper

Preparing Woodland's first yearbook was an enormous task. At the beginning of the year we did not know each other well so it took some time to establish good working relations between us and the staff. After that, we began to see the challenge presented to us to produce a quality yearbook that would set the standards for years to come.

Co-Editors — Tommy Marshall and Patricia

Ronald Vickery

"His sun went down in the morning,
While all was fair and bright;
But 'twas not an eclipse of darkness
That hid him from our sight;

For the valley of death was brighter
Than the hills of life he trod,
And the peace that fell on his spirit
Was the calm, deep peace of God.

His sun went down in the morning,
While all was fair and bright;
But it shines today on the far-away hills,
In the land that knows no night."

Joycere, a incredibly intelligent person who I have an experience that I will tell you have brightened up my life you made. You have erased. You will always be in my heart. Next time you see along tell him I just know though he doesn't because that is all about him talk about but all you ever talk I really to tell the truth I know that you mine. Just strongly about him feel that strong enough. Love always

Hello, gal ! % '8

To my darling daughter, Joyce Congratulations on your efforts to improve academically. It is evident that your potentials far exceed your own expectations at this point, however, with your perseverance and creativity there are no limits to what you can achieve. It is important that you believe in yourself, your family and in God. It is also my hope that each of your remaining years of schooling will result in the kinds of growth - academic and social - that lead inevitably to success.

Remember that we love you and support your efforts to find your place in life.

With everlasting love,
your mother
